The Wine Press And The

A winepress is a device used to extract juice from crushed grapes during wine making.There are a number of different styles of presses that are used by wine makers but their overall functionality is the same. Each style of press exerts controlled pressure in order to free the juice from the fruit (most often grapes).

Winepress - Wikipedia

The history of the wine press and of pressing is nearly as old as the history of wine itself with the remains of wine presses providing some of the longest-serving evidence of organised viticulture and winemaking in the ancient world. The earliest wine press was probably the human foot or hand, crushing and squeezing grapes into a bag or container where the contents would ferment.

History of the wine press - Wikipedia

Wine Press. At the end of primary fermentation a wine press will generally be used to separate out the solids (grape skins or fruit pulp) from the liquid. As the press is loaded with pulp, the 'free run' liquid will run out of the press and all of the solids will be held back by the press basket.
